Looking Them Over

By Jack Kelly
Open Chatter
An Experiment
Reduced Teams

BIG JAM MOUNTIFIED has won a lot of prestige for the coming $500 Alberta golf championship with the brand of play he turned in yesterday when he and Doug Kilburn made good their first defence of the Evans challenge trophy.

There is no question but what this year's open will draw the finest array of shotmakers that Alberta has ever seen in action at one time, since the crown of the amateur crop will be in three battling with the men who make their living at the game. Add to this choice group of Albertans two or three of the leading pros from Saskatchewan and three or four of Vancouver's top-notchers and you have a fairly classy field.

Talk of the open is about all you hear around the city's golf clubs these days, with no one making so hold as to play the winner until the complete entry list is available. Stan Leonard of Vancouver will probably be the favorite, however, if he enters, as is expected.

Mountified is likely to finish right in the front again, though. His game is taking on a keen edge these days and he is the broker in that he will be playing over his home course, the Edmonton Golf and Country Club. Where the competitors in 72 holes of medal play, there is a distinct advantage in knowing every wrinkle of the fairways and greens since a single stroke may decide the championship.

Putting up $500 in prize money for this year's open is an experiment whose success will depend largely on the response of the golf-minded public. There has been a feeling among many officials of the Alberta Golf Association that the public here would turn out to see western top-notchers in action. A considerable portion of the prize money will have to be related to admission charges. The 1938 city final between Murray and Jack Starkey drew a gallery of over 1000 in the Country Club and it seems reasonable to expect a similar gallery for play of the calibre which this coming open should produce.

Martell Must Be Figured In

EVEN at such an early stage as this, Henry Martell must be considered as one of the biggest names that will come in to the Alberta open as the defending open champion, the city and provincial amateur champion, and he just stepped out yesterday to add the Highlands Club title to his 1937 winning. For the past two years Henry has seldom been more than one or two strokes above par on 36 holes of competitive play, and generally he manages to finish up under par. He is turning up with deadly earnestness for the coming open and to date his form is just as good as that of any Alberta pro.

As with this tourney would be a big day for Henry in the way he has his heart set on going into golf as a profession. His great problem in present is getting into such a position that he will be able to play the year around. No one can go places in major golf playing only the few months that one can play in Alberta.

Six-Man Gridiron Squads

WITHIN another couple of weeks school bells will be tolling daily again and scores of scholars in towns and rural areas will be trying to regain open ground players for a football team. In a lot of places it is impossible to get enough good players for the full squad and even harder to get equipment and transportation for such a large outfit.

Down in the southern states there are many schools that have been held up in football by these same problems. They have solved them by using six-man teams. They put a entire squad with a wing on each side of line, quarter-back and two backfield men. The field is 30 yards long and 40 yards wide. Reports are that this makes a really good game. By stepping the team up to eight men, by putting two more on the line, the amount of play is greatly increased.

Another advantage of these small teams is that it allows larger schools to have several teams and its own league. With proper equipment for all and fewer players there are a lot less injuries and much more open field running.
